

Response Ability

Vista Publications is pleased to release Response Ability, a selection of writings by Associate Professor, Frank Fisher, launched in July 2006.

A social constructivist theorist, Frank Fisher has worked to demonstrate that looking after environment means looking after physical, mental and social wellbeing. Through writing, projects and campaigns he has consistently shown that everyone is capable of transforming their social and mental contexts: to be Response Able for their relationship with environment.

Response Ability, in 300 pages, covers the following:

- general definitions of responsibility and the social construction of reality
- environmental science
- social construction of energy, transport and other environmental issues
- social construction of illness and disability
- taking effective action for social change.
