

A Compass for Turbulent Times

with Nicole Foss and Steve Keen

Practical strategies for you and your community with two globally renowned money gurus!

Nicole Foss is one of those big picture people who understands and explains the links between the converging pressures affecting the globe (peak oil, climate change, financial crisis) and the implications for our everyday lives. Nicole explains why a period of deflation is likely and discusses the strategies that you can implement to weather the storm. Learn how to gain some control over the essentials of your own existence, and build social capital in your communities.

Nicole will be joined by Australia's own Steve Keen, who is widely recognised as one of only a handful of economists across the world who predicted the ongoing current financial crisis.

In this workshop you will hear detailed presentations from both Nicole and Steve. This is an interactive workshop where we will test real life situations and strategies with the experts with time available for questions.

This workshop is for everyone: people with money, people with no money, retirees, students, families, small business owners, property owners and renters.

ABOUT THE TEACHERS:

Nicole Foss is a systems analyst from Ontario, Canada. Nicole blogs under the name "Stoneleigh" at The Automatic Earth www.theautomaticearth.blogspot.com. Her academic qualifications include a BSc in biology (focusing on neuroscience and psychology), a post-graduate diploma in air and water pollution control and two law degrees.

Steve Keen is Professor of Economics & Finance at the University of Western Sydney, and author of the popular book Debunking Economics and websites www.debtdeflation.com/blogs and www.debunkingeconomics.com/. Steve Keen has over 60 academic publications and has challenged many widely believed economic models that dominate academic thinking about finance today-even in the midst of global financial crisis.
